Two sessions of the program are held annually in June, and I typically address both sessions. My remarks offer an introduction for the teachers on how the Supreme Court decides which cases to review and how it decides those cases on the merits.

Prior to joining the bench, I also regularly participated in press briefings sponsored by the National Legal Center for the Public Interest and the Washington Legal Foundation upon the opening of a new Supreme Court term or the Court's rising for the summer.

At the request of Benjamin Ginsberg and Ted Cruz, I went to Tallahassee in November 2000 to assist those working on behalf of George W. Bush on various aspects of the recount litigation. My recollection is that I stayed less than one week. I recall participating in a preparation session for another lawyer scheduled to appear before the Florida Supreme Court and generally being available to discuss issues as they arose. I returned to Tallahassee at some later point to meet with Governor Jeb Bush, to discuss in a general way the constitutional and statutory provisions implicated by the litigation.

15. Legal Career: Please answer each part separately.

a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:

i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

After graduation from law school, I served as a law clerk to Judge Henry J. Friendly, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, 40 Foley Square, New York, N.Y. 10007. At the time, Judge Friendly also served as Presiding Judge of the Special Railroad Reorganization Court, a three-judge district court. I clerked for Judge Friendly from June 1979 to June 1980.

I next served as a law clerk to then-Associate Justice William H. Rehnquist, Supreme Court of the United States, One First Street, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20543. I served in that capacity from July 1980 to August 1981.

ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

No.

iii. the dates, names and addresses of law firms or offices, companies or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated, and the nature of your affiliation with each.

After completing my clerkship with Justice Rehnquist, I accepted appointment as a Special Assistant to Attorney General William French Smith, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20530. I served in that capacity from August 1981 to November 1982.

I left the Department of Justice in November 1982 to accept an appointment as Associate Counsel to the President, White House Counsel's Office, 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20500.

I left the White House Counsel's Office in May 1986 to join the Washington law firm of Hogan & Hartson as an associate. I was elected a general partner of the firm in October 1987. Hogan & Hartson is now located at 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004.

I resigned my partnership in the firm in October 1989 to accept an appointment as Principal Deputy Solicitor General, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20530.

I left the Solicitor General's Office in January 1993 to rejoin Hogan & Hartson as a partner. I resigned my partnership in May 2003 to assume the bench.

b. Describe:

i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1986 until I joined the bench in 2003, I had an intensive federal appellate litigation practice, in both the private and public sectors, with an emphasis on Supreme Court litigation. During that period I orally argued 39 times before the Supreme Court, in addition to arguments before the United States Courts of Appeals for the District of Columbia, Federal, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, and Tenth Circuits, as well as the District of Columbia and Maryland Courts of Appeals. The subject matter of these cases covered the full range of federal jurisdiction, including administrative law, admiralty, antitrust, arbitration, banking, bankruptcy, civil rights, constitutional law, environmental law, federal jurisdiction and procedure, First Amendment, health care law, Indian law, interstate commerce, labor law, and patent and trade dress law.

In addition to presenting oral argument and briefing the cases on the merits, my Supreme Court practice consisted of seeking and opposing Supreme Court review, seeking and opposing stays pending such review, preparing amicus curiae briefs on behalf of clients interested in pending Supreme Court matters, helping to prepare other counsel to argue before the Court, and counseling clients on the impact of specific Supreme Court rulings.

The court of appeals aspect of my federal appellate practice involved appearances in every federal circuit court of appeals, although the largest number of my court of appeals arguments were before the Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. I did not specialize in any particular substantive area, but instead in the preparation of appellate briefs and the presentation of appellate oral argument.

The nature of my practice was essentially the same during my time at Hogan & Hartson and when I served as Principal Deputy Solicitor General, although of course during the latter period my sole client was the United States and its agencies and officers. As Principal Deputy Solicitor General, my duties included presenting oral argument before the Supreme Court and preparing and filing briefs on the merits on behalf of the United States, its agencies and officers, subject to the supervision of the Solicitor General and with the assistance of subordinates in the Office of the Solicitor General. I also supervised the preparation and filing of petitions for and briefs in opposition to certiorari, and engaged in an active motions practice seeking or opposing stays or other relief from the Supreme Court. In addition to this actual litigation before the Court, my duties included participating in the government's determination whether to appeal adverse decisions in the lower courts. Any such appeal, whether from a district court to an appellate court or from a circuit court to the Supreme Court, requires the approval of the Solicitor General. The same is true for any filing of a suggestion for rehearing en banc before a court of appeals.

Immediately prior to joining Hogan & Hartson for the first time in 1986, I served in counseling and advisory roles in the federal government. My duties as Associate Counsel to the President involved reviewing bills submitted to the President for signature or veto, drafting and reviewing executive orders and proclamations, and generally reviewing the full range of Presidential activities for potential legal problems. I participated in drafting and reviewed various documents embodying Presidential action under certain trade, aviation, asset control, and other laws. I played a role in the Presidential appointment process, reviewing the Federal Bureau of Investigation background reports and ethics disclosures of prospective executive branch appointees.

My duties as Special Assistant to Attorney General William French Smith were also of an advisory nature, focusing on particular matters of concern to the Attorney General. I also served as a speechwriter and represented the Attorney General throughout the Executive Branch and before state and local law enforcement officials.

I was fortunate to have two appellate clerkships immediately after law school. Judge Henry J. Friendly is justly remembered as one of this Nation's truly outstanding federal appellate judges. The clerkship on the Supreme Court for then-Associate Justice Rehnquist the following year was an intensive immersion in the federal appellate process at the highest level.

ii. your typical former clients and the areas, if any, in which you have specialized.

Clients of Hogan & Hartson for whom I rendered substantial legal services included large and small corporations, state and local governments, trade and professional organizations, nonprofit associations, and individuals. Such clients included, for example, the States of Alaska and Hawaii, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, Litton Industries, Inc., Gonzaga University, the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, the Credit Union National Association, Pulte Corporation, and Intergraph Corporation.

From October 1989 to January 1993, my sole client was the United States, its agencies and officers. With minor exceptions, the Office of the Solicitor General is the exclusive representative of the federal government before the Supreme Court. I accordingly represented a wide variety of departments, agencies, and other entities within the federal government. In doing so, I worked with each of the litigating divisions in the Department of Justice. Also included among my clients were individual officers of the United States or its agencies sued in Bivens actions.

My clients during my service as Associate Counsel to the President included the President of the United States and members of the White House staff. As Special Assistant to the Attorney General, my client was the Attorney General.

While in practice, I specialized in federal appellate litigation.

c. Describe whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

I appeared in federal court frequently while in practice, arguing over 65 cases before the Supreme Court of the United States, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and various other federal circuit courts of appeals. The public service positions I held prior to 1986 did not involve court appearances, although my two clerkships necessarily afforded intensive exposure to the appellate process.

i. Indicate the percentage of these appearances in:
   1. federal courts;
   2. state courts of record;
   3. other courts.

Federal courts: approx. 95 percent
State courts of record: approx. 5 percent

ii. Indicate the percentage of these appearances in:
   1. civil proceedings;
   2. criminal proceedings.

Civil proceedings: approx. 95 percent
Criminal proceedings: approx. 5 percent

d. State the number of cases in courts of record you tried to verdict or judgment (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

As noted, my practice was primarily an appellate one, and my appearances in court were typically to argue appeals. I have personally argued over 65 cases leading to a final appellate judgment. I have, however, also appeared on occasion in trial courts.

i. What percentage of these trials were:
   1. jury;
   2. non-jury.

One trial proceeding in which I served as an associate counsel was before a jury, although my participation in the case did not involve work before the jury itself.

e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Please supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice. Give a detailed summary of the substance of each case, outlining briefly the factual and legal issues involved, the party or parties whom you represented, describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case, and provide the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

From 1986 until 2003, I appeared frequently before the Supreme Court, both as counsel of record and as co-counsel to others. The nature of this practice is described above in the response to question 15.b. During that period I orally argued 39 times before the Court in 38 separate matters. A description of each of these cases, and my participation, follows:

1. Smith v. Doe, 538 U.S. 84 (2003). This case involved a challenge to the Alaska Sex Offender Registration Act, which required convicted sex offenders to register with law enforcement authorities and made offender information available to the public. The question presented was whether the application of the Act to offenders convicted before its enactment violated the Ex Post Facto Clause of the United States Constitution. Representing the petitioners, the Alaska Commissioner of Public Safety and the Alaska Attorney General, I argued that the Act was not punitive in nature and therefore did not implicate the Ex Post Facto Clause. Justice Kennedy's majority opinion accepted this argument and upheld the constitutionality of the Act.

I shared oral argument with Theodore B. Olson, then Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, and now with Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher L.L.P., 1050 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 955-8668, who appeared on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae in support of the petitioners. My co-counsel on the brief were Jonathan S. Franklin and Catherine E. Stetson of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Cynthia M. Cooper, 3410 Southbluff Circle, Anchorage, AK 99515, (907) 349-3483, and Bruce M. Botelho, then Alaska Attorney General, P.O. Box 110300, Juneau, AK 99811, (907) 465-3600. Mr. Botelho is now mayor of the City and Bureau of Juneau, 155 S. Seward Street, Juneau, AK 99801, (907) 586-5240. Principal counsel for the respondents were Verne E. Rupright of Rupright & Foster, 322 Main Street, Wasilla, AK 99654, (907) 373-3215, and Daryl L. Thompson of Daryl L. Thompson P.C., 841 I Street, Anchorage, AK 99501, (907) 272-9322.

2. Barnhart v. Peabody Coal Co., 537 U.S. 149 (2003). The Coal Act of 1992 calls on the Commissioner of Social Security to assign coal industry retirees to particular coal companies "before October 1, 1993," for the purpose of funding retiree benefits. The question presented was whether assignments made after the specified date were nonetheless valid, or whether retirees not assigned in time should be allocated pursuant to the formula for unassigned retirees. Representing respondents Peabody Coal Company and Eastern Associated Coal Corporation, I argued that the statute precluded the Commissioner from making belated assignments. Writing for the majority, Justice Souter rejected this argument, reasoning that the date in question was meant to spur the Commissioner to action but did not restrict the time in which she could act.

With me on the brief were Lorane F. Hebert of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and John R. Woodrum and W. Gregory Mott of Heenan, Althen & Roles L.L.P., 1110 Vermont Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 887-0800. Jeffery S. Sutton, then of Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue, 1900 Huntington Center, 41 South High Street, Columbus, OH 43215, (614)

469-3855, and now a judge on the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, 540 Potter Stewart U.S. Courthouse, 100 East Fifth Street, Cincinnati, OH 45202, (513) 564-7000, argued on behalf of respondents Bellaire Corporation, Nacco Industries, and North American Coal Corporation. Peter Buscemi of Morgan, Lewis & Bockius L.L.P., 1111 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 739-5190, represented petitioners United Mine Workers of America Combined Benefit Fund. Barbara B. McDowell, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, represented petitioner Barnhart.

3. Rush Prudential HMO Inc. v. Moran, 536 U.S. 355 (2002). Under an Illinois statute, if a patient's primary care physician deems a procedure to be necessary but the patient's HMO disagrees, the patient is entitled to have the HMO's decision reviewed by an outside physician, and that outside physician's decision is binding on the HMO. The question before the Court was whether this independent review provision was pre-empted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). Representing the petitioner, I argued that the provision conflicted with ERISA's exclusive remedial scheme. Justice Souter's majority opinion disagreed, reasoning that the provision was protected by ERISA's savings clause.

I was assisted by Clifford D. Stromberg, Craig A. Hoover, Jonathan S. Franklin, and Catherine E. Stetson of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and James T Ferrini, Michael R. Grimm, Sr., and Melinda S. Kollross of Clausen Miller P.C., 10 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 855-1010. Respondent Debra Moran was represented by Daniel P. Albers of Barnes & Thornburg, 2600 Chase Plaza, 10 South LaSalle, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 357-1313. Respondent the State of Illinois was represented by John P. Schmidt, Assistant Attorney General, 100 West Randolph Street, 12th Floor, Chicago, IL 60601, (312) 814-3312. Edwin S. Kneedler, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae in support of the respondents.

4. Gonzaga University v. Doe, 536 U.S. 273 (2002). John Doe sought damages from Gonzaga University for the unauthorized release of personal information in violation of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA). The question presented was whether FERPA's provisions could be enforced by a suit for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, which provides a cause of action for the deprivation of "rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws." I represented the University and argued that FERPA did not create personal rights, and thus could not be so enforced. The Chief Justice's opinion for the majority accepted this argument and held that a Section 1983 action could not be maintained under these circumstances.

I shared oral argument with Patricia A. Millett, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, who appeared on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae in support of the University. With me on the briefs were Martin Michaelson, Alexander E. Dreier, and Lorane F. Hebert of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Charles K. Wiggins and Kenneth W. Masters of the Wiggins Law Office, 241 Madison Avenue, N. Bainbridge Island, WA 98110 (206) 780-5033. Beth S. Brinkmann of Morrison & Foerster L.L.P., 2000 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 887-1544, represented respondent Doe.

5. Tahoe-Sierra Preservation Council Inc. v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, 535 U.S. 302 (2002). The Tahoe Regional Planning Agency instituted temporary moratoria on development while devising a comprehensive land use plan. The question presented was whether the moratoria constituted a taking of property that required compensation under the Takings Clause of the United States Constitution. Representing the respondent Planning Agency, I argued that the enactment of temporary moratoria does not constitute a per se taking, and that the moratoria instead should be evaluated using a fact-specific inquiry set forth in prior Supreme Court opinions. Under that inquiry, there was no taking. The Court agreed, with Justice Stevens writing for the majority.

I shared oral argument with Theodore B. Olson, then Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, and now with Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher L.L.P., 1050 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 955-8668, appearing on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae supporting the respondents. With me on the brief were E. Clement Shute, Jr., Fran M. Layton, and Ellison Folk of Shute, Mihaly & Weinberger L.L.P., 396 Hayes Street, San Francisco, CA 94102, (415) 552-7272, John L. Marshall, Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, P.O. Box 1038, Zephyr Cove, NV 89448, (775) 588-4547, and Richard J. Lazarus, 600 New Jersey Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001, (202) 662-9129. The petitioners were represented by Michael M. Berger of Berger & Norton Law Corporation, 1620 26th Street, Suite 200, South Santa Monica, CA 90404, (310) 449-1000.

6. Toyota Motor Mfg., Kentucky, Inc. v. Williams, 534 U.S. 184 (2002). Respondent Williams sued her former employer under the Americans with Disabilities Act, for failing to provide her with a reasonable accommodation for carpel tunnel syndrome and related injuries. The question presented was whether the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, which had ruled for Williams, had applied the proper standard in concluding that Williams's injuries qualified as a "major life impairment" under the Act. Representing petitioner Toyota, I argued that the Sixth Circuit erred in only considering the effect of the injuries on a specific set of work-related tasks, rather than on a wide range of life activities. Justice O'Connor's opinion for a unanimous Court accepted this argument and reversed and remanded the case so that the Sixth Circuit could apply the proper standard.

I shared oral argument with Barbara B. McDowell, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, who appeared on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae supporting the petitioners. I was assisted by Christopher T. Handman and Catherine E. Stetson of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Jeffrey A. Savarise, John A. West, and Katherine A. Hessenbruch of Greenebaum Doll & McDonald P.L.L.C., 3300 National City Tower 101, South Fifth Street, Louisville, KY 40202, (502) 589-4200.

Robert L. Rosenbaum of Rosenbaum & Rosenbaum P.S.C., 300 Lexington Building 201, West Short Street, Lexington, KY 40507, (859) 259-1321, represented the respondent.

7. TrafFix Devices Inc. v. Marketing Displays Inc., 532 U.S. 23 (2001). Marketing Displays had patented a dual-spring base design that made road signs more resistant to wind, which TrafFix Devices copied and improved upon after Marketing Displays' patent expired. The question presented was whether the subject matter of a utility patent can be protected as trade dress after the patent expires. On behalf of TrafFix Devices, I argued that the ruling below was inconsistent with the basic "patent bargain" recognized by the Supreme Court: society grants a patent holder exclusive rights to his invention for a limited period of time, on the condition that the invention becomes public property when the patent expires. The Supreme Court agreed with this position in a unanimous opinion authored by Justice Kennedy, and ruled that the sign stand could not qualify for trade dress protection.

Co-counsel with me were Gregory G. Garre, Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Jeanne-Marie Marshall and Richard W. Hoffmann, Reising, Ethington, Barnes, Kisselle, Learman & McCulloch, P.C., 201 W. Big Beaver, Suite 400, Troy, MI 48084, (248) 689-3500. I shared oral argument with Lawrence G. Wallace, then Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, appearing on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae supporting the petitioner. John A. Artz, Artz & Artz, P.C., 28333 Telegraph Road, Suite 250, Smithfield, MI 48034, (248) 223-9500, argued for the respondent.

8. Eastern Associated Coal Corp. v. United Mine Workers of America, Dist. 17, 531 U.S. 57 (2000). Eastern Associated Coal sued to vacate an arbitration award requiring it to reinstate a truck driver who had twice tested positive for marijuana. The question before the Court was whether the arbitration award should be set aside. Representing Eastern Associated Coal, I argued that the Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act of 1991 and implementing regulations reflected a well-defined public policy against employees performing safety-sensitive jobs under the influence of illegal drugs, and that the award should be set aside on the basis of that policy. Justice Breyer, writing for the majority, refused to vacate the award, holding that the Testing Act's complex remedial scheme counseled against courts divining a broader public policy from it.

With me on the brief were David G. Leitch and H. Christopher Bartolomucci of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Ronald E. Meisburg of Heenan, Althen & Roles, 1110 Vermont Avenue, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 887-0800, and Anna M. Dailey and Donna C. Kelly Hennan of Althen & Roles, 1380 One Valley Square, P.O. Box 2549, Charleston, W.V. 25329, (304) 342-8960. Mr. Leitch is now General Counsel of Ford Motor Company, One American Road, Dearborn, MI 48126, (313) 322-7453. The respondents were represented by John R. Mooney of Mooney, Green, Gleason, Baker, Gibson, & Saindon P.C., 1920 L St., N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 783-0010. Malcolm L. Stewart, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae in support of the respondents.

9. Rice v. Cayetano, 528 U.S. 495 (2000). The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit upheld a Hawaiian statute providing that only Native Hawaiians could vote for the trustees who administered certain trusts established to benefit Native Hawaiians. The issue before the Supreme Court was whether such a restriction constituted racial discrimination in violation the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. On behalf of the State, I argued that the classification was based on trust beneficiary status rather than race, and that the classification was also permissible because Congress had recognized the political status of Native Hawaiians as an indigenous people. Justice Kennedy, writing for the majority, rejected these arguments and struck down the statute.

On the brief with me were Gregory G. Garre and Lorane F. Hebert of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Attorney General Earl L. Anzai and Deputy Attorneys General Girard D. Lau, Dorothy Sellers, and Charleen M. Aina of the State of Hawaii, 425 Queen Street, Honolulu, Hawaii 96813, (808) 586-1360. Counsel for petitioner was Theodore B. Olson, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, 1050 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 955-8500. Edwin S. Kneedler, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae urging affirmance.

10. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n v. Smith, 525 U.S. 459 (1999). The Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit had ruled that Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 — which applies only to organizations that receive federal financial assistance — applied to the NCAA, because it received dues from entities that receive federal financial assistance. The issue on the merits was what it meant to "receiv[e] Federal financial assistance" under the terms of the statute. On behalf of the NCAA, we argued that according to Supreme Court precedent, coverage under the statute is limited to direct recipients of federal funding — those who knowingly entered into a bargain by accepting the funding. In a unanimous opinion written by Justice Ginsburg, the Supreme Court agreed with this position and reversed the Third Circuit.

Appearing on the briefs with me were Martin Michaelson, Gregory G. Garre, and Lorane F. Hebert of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, John J. Kitchin and Robert W. McKinley of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Kitchin & McLarney, 922 Walnut Street, Suite 1500, Kansas City, MO 64106, (816) 842-6100, and Elsa Kircher Cole, General Counsel, National Collegiate Athletic Association, One NCAA Plaza, 700 West Washington Street, Indianapolis, IN 46204, (317) 917-6222. Representing the respondent was Carter Phillips, Sidley & Austin, 1722 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 736-8000. Edwin S. Kneedler, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae supporting the respondent.

11. Feltner v. Columbia Pictures Television Inc., 523 U.S. 340 (1998). A district court granted summary judgment against petitioner Feltner in a copyright infringement suit. The question before the Supreme Court was whether the petitioner had a right to have his claim determined by a jury. I represented the petitioner, and argued that both the Copyright Act and the Seventh Amendment of the United States Constitution guaranteed a right to jury trial in copyright infringement cases. Writing for eight Justices, Justice Thomas rejected my Copyright Act argument, but agreed that the Seventh Amendment created a right to jury trial in such cases and remanded the case to district court so that a jury trial could be held.

I was assisted by David G. Leitch and Jonathan S. Franklin of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600. Principal counsel for the respondent was Henry J. Tashman of Davis Wright Tremaine L.L.P., 1000 Wilshire Boulevard, Suite 600, Los Angeles, CA 90017, (213) 633-6800.

12. National Credit Union Admin. v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 522 U.S. 479 (1998). The National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) interpreted the Federal Credit Union Act to allow credit unions to be composed of multiple, unrelated employee groups, each having a common bond of occupation. The questions before the Court were whether commercial banks had standing to challenge the NCUA's interpretation, and, if so, whether that interpretation was permissible. I represented petitioners, Credit Union National Association and AT&T Family Federal Credit Union, and argued that commercial banks lacked prudential standing because they were outside the "zone of interest" protected by the statute, and that the NCUA's interpretation was reasonable and entitled to deference. Writing for the majority, Justice Thomas disagreed, holding that commercial banks did have prudential standing and that the NCUA's interpretation was impermissible because the Act required all members of credit unions to share the same common bond.

With me on the briefs were Jonathan S. Franklin of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Brenda S. Furlow, Credit Union National Association, Inc., 5710 Mineral Point Road, Box 431, Madison, WI 53701, (608) 231-4348, and Paul J. Lambert, Teresa Burke, and Gerard F. Finn of Bingham, Dana, & Gould L.L.P., 1200 19th Street, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 778-6150. Petitioner National Credit Union Administration was represented by Seth P. Waxman, then Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, and now with Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale & Dorr, 2445 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037, (202) 663-6800. Respondents were represented by Michael S. Helfer of Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale & Dorr, 2445 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037, (202) 663-6000.

13. Alaska v. Native Village of Venetie Tribal Government, 522 U.S. 520 (1998). An Alaskan native village attempted to levy a business tax against a state contractor hired to construct a school on village property. The question before the Court was whether the land owned by the village — an expanse of 1.8 million acres — constituted "Indian Country," such that the village was its sovereign with taxing authority. Representing the State of Alaska, I argued that Congress alone can recognize an area as "Indian Country," and that Congress had made no such recognition in awarding the land to the village in the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971. Writing for a unanimous court, Justice Thomas agreed and held that the village lacked the authority to impose the tax.

I was assisted by Gregory G. Garre of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Bruce M. Botelho, then Attorney General, Barbara J. Ritchie, Deputy Attorney General, and D. Rebecca Snow and Elizabeth J. Barry, Assistant Attorneys General, State of Alaska Department of Law, P.O. Box 110300, Juneau, AK 99811, (907) 465-3600. Mr. Botelho is now mayor of the City and Bureau of Juneau, 155 S. Seward Street, Juneau, AK 99801, (907) 586-5240. Respondents were represented by Heather R. Kendall-Miller, Native American Rights Fund, 310 K Street, Suite 708, Anchorage, AK 99501, (907) 276-0680.

14. Jefferson v. City of Tarrant, Alabama, 522 U.S. 75 (1997). Petitioners sued the City of Tarrant for wrongful death in a fire. The question presented was whether the City could be held liable, given the interaction between the Alabama wrongful death statute and 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The former had been interpreted to allow only punitive damages and the latter does not allow plaintiffs to sue municipalities for punitive damages. Representing the City, I argued that the United States Supreme Court lacked jurisdiction to hear the case, because the Alabama Supreme Court had not yet rendered a final judgment in the matter. Writing for eight Justices, Justice Ginsburg agreed and dismissed the writ of certiorari as improvidently granted.

I was assisted by Gregory G. Garre and H. Christopher Bartolomucci of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Wayne Morse, John W. Clark, Jr., and David W. McDowell of Clark & Scott P.C., 3500 Blue Lake Drive, Suite 350, Birmingham, AL 35248, (205) 967-9675. Dennis G. Pantazis of Gordon, Silberman, Wiggins & Childs P.C., 1400 SouthTrust Tower, Birmingham, AL 35203, (205) 328-0640, represented the petitioners.

15. Adams v. Robertson, 520 U.S. 83 (1997). Alabama state courts approved a class action lawsuit and settlement agreement in a case against Liberty Life Insurance Company, without providing individual class members the right to exclude themselves from the class or the settlement. The question before the Court was whether that approval violated the class members' Due Process rights under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. Representing the respondent, I argued that the United States Supreme Court lacked jurisdiction to hear the case, as the question presented had been neither raised nor decided by the Alabama Supreme Court. In a unanimous, per curiam opinion, the Supreme Court agreed and dismissed the writ of certiorari as improvidently granted.

With me on the brief were David G. Leitch, Gregory G. Garre, and Amy Folsom Kett of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Michael R. Pennington, James W. Gewin, and James W. Davis of Bradley, Arant, Rose & White, 1400 Park Place Tower, Birmingham, AL 35203, (205) 521-8391, and

William C. Barclift and Edgar M. Elliott, III, Liberty National Life Insurance Company, P.O. Box 2612, Birmingham, AL 35202, (205) 325-2778. Respondent Charlie Robertson was represented by Paul M. Smith of Jenner & Block, 601 Thirteenth Street, N.W., Twelfth Floor, Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 639-6000. The petitioners were represented by Norman E. Waldrop, Jr., of Armbrecht, Jackson, DeMouy, Crowe, Holmes & Reeves L.L.C., P.O. Box 290, Mobile, AL 36601, (334) 405-1300.

16. First Options of Chicago Inc. v. Kaplan, 514 U.S. 938 (1995). The Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit vacated an arbitral award in a case involving debts to First Options of Chicago, a stock-clearing company. The questions presented were what standard a trial court should use in reviewing an arbitrator's conclusion that the parties had agreed to arbitration, and what standard a court of appeals should use in reviewing that trial court's ruling confirming the award. Representing respondent Manuel Kaplan — one of the parties against whom the arbitrator had ruled — I argued that the first issue should be reviewed de novo and that the second issue should be reviewed according to ordinary appellate review standards. Writing for a unanimous Court, Justice Breyer agreed and affirmed the Third Circuit's decision.

My co-counsel on the brief were David G. Leitch of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Donald L. Perelman and Richard A. Koffman of Fine, Kaplan & Black, 1845 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103, (215) 567-6565. Respondent Carol Kaplan was represented by Gary A. Rosen of Connolly Epstein Chicco Foxman Engelmyer & Ewing, 1515 Market Street, 9th Floor, Philadelphia, PA 19102, (215) 851-8426. The petitioner was represented by James D. Holzhauer of Mayer, Brown & Platt, 190 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 782-0600.

17. Jerome B. Grubart Inc. v. Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co., 513 U.S. 527 (1995). The respondent, which owned a barge involved in construction on the banks of the Chicago River, sought to limit its liability for damages that occurred when the river flooded into a set of tunnels beneath the City of Chicago. The question presented was whether federal courts had admiralty jurisdiction over the case. Representing the respondent, I argued that they did, as the barge was a "vessel on navigable waters" under the Extension of Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, and as Great Lakes' allegedly negligent actions posed a threat to maritime commerce. Justice Souter's opinion for the majority accepted this argument and reinstated the case in district court.

With me on the brief were David G. Leitch of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Duane M. Kelley and Jack J. Crowe of Winston & Strawn, 35 West Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60601, (312) 558-5600. Petitioner Jerome G. Grubart was represented by Ben Barnow of Barnow and Hefty P.C., 105 W. Madison St., Ste. 2200, Chicago, IL 60602 (312) 621-2000. Petitioner City of Chicago was represented by Lawrence Rosenthal, Deputy Corporation Counsel, Room 610, City Hall, Chicago, IL 60602, (312) 744-5337.

18. International Union, United Mine Workers of America v. Bagwell, 512 U.S. 821 (1994). In a Virginia civil contempt proceeding, petitioners were assessed $64 million in fines for violating a court-ordered injunction barring them from engaging in unlawful strike-related activities. The question before the Court was whether the fine amounted to a criminal penalty that could be constitutionally levied only after a jury trial. Representing respondents, including the special commissioner appointed to collect the fine, I argued that the fine was a civil penalty because it had been assessed according to a prospective schedule of fines announced with the court's earlier injunction and was therefore coercive, not punitive. The Court disagreed and unanimously ruled that a jury trial was required.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were David G. Leitch and Kathryn W. Lovill, Hogan & Hartson, 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and William B. Poff, Clinton S. Morse, Frank K. Friedman, Woods, Rogers & Hazlegrove, Dominion Tower, Suite 1400, 10 South Jefferson Street, Roanoke, VA 24038, (703) 983-7600. Arguing for petitioners was Laurence Gold, 815 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 637-5390.

19. Digital Equipment Corp. v. Desktop Direct, Inc., 511 U.S. 863 (1994). Digital Equipment Corp. sought to appeal a district court's decision to vacate a settlement agreement Digital had reached with Desktop Direct. The question presented was whether the decision to vacate was appealable as a collateral order even without final resolution of Desktop Direct's cause of action. I argued on behalf of Digital Equipment that the decision was appealable because it met the established criteria of conclusively resolving the issue of Digital's right not to go to trial under the settlement agreement, was separate from the underlying merits, and was effectively unreviewable on appeal from a final judgment. The Court, in a unanimous opinion by Justice Souter, ruled that the decision to vacate was not appealable as a collateral order.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Thomas C. Siekman and Andrew C. Holcomb, Digital Equipment Corporation, 111 Powdermill Road, Maynard, MA 01754, (508) 493-3264, David G. Leitch and Denise P. Lindberg, Hogan & Hartson, 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Laurence R. Hefter and David M. Kelly, Finnegan, Henderson, Farabow, Garrett & Dunner, 1300 I Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 408-4000. Arguing for respondent Desktop Direct was the late Rex E. Lee, then of Sidley & Austin, 1722 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 736-8000. Mr. Lee was assisted by Carter Phillips, also of Sidley & Austin.

20. Helling v. McKinney, 509 U.S. 25 (1993). William McKinney, an inmate in the Nevada prison system, sued state officials claiming that having to share a cell with a smoker violated the Eighth Amendment's proscription of "cruel and unusual punishment." The question before the Court was whether exposure to environmental tobacco smoke could serve as the basis for such a claim. I argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae that exposure to tobacco smoke did not amount to a "serious deprivation of basic human needs" under the Court's Eighth Amendment decisions. The Court ruled that the claim could go forward, in part because the Court considered it premature to dismiss respondent's claim as a matter of law on the grounds I had advanced.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Stuart M. Gerson, then Assistant Attorney General, Edwin S. Kneedler, Assistant to the Solicitor General, William Kanter, Peter R. Maier, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Mr. Starr is now Dean at Pepperdine University School of Law, 24255 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu, CA 90263. Arguing for petitioner was Frankie Sue Del Papa, Attorney General of the State of Nevada, Capitol Complex, Carson City, NV 89710, (702) 687-4170. Arguing for respondent was Cornish F. Hitchcock, Public Citizen Litigation Group, 2000 P Street, N.W., Suite 700 Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 833-3000.

21. Withrow v. Williams, 507 U.S. 680 (1993). Robert Williams, a Michigan prisoner, filed a federal habeas corpus action challenging his murder convictions on the ground that they were obtained using statements taken in violation of his rights under Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966). The question before the Court was whether federal habeas jurisdiction extended to claims of Miranda violations, or whether instead such claims should be treated like certain Fourth Amendment claims that are not cognizable in habeas under Stone v. Powell, 428 U.S. 465 (1976). As Deputy Solicitor General, I argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae that the claims were not cognizable in habeas. The Court disagreed, and in a 5-4 decision, ruled that federal habeas jurisdiction extended to claims grounded in Miranda.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Robert S. Mueller, III, then Assistant Attorney General and Ronald J. Mann, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioner was Jeffrey Caminsky, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, 12th Floor, 1441 St. Antoine Detroit, MI 48226, (313) 224-5846. Arguing for respondent was Seth P. Waxman, then of Miller, Cassidy, Larroca & Lewin, 2555 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., 20037, (202) 833-5125. Mr. Waxman is now at Wilmer, Cutler, Pickering, Hale & Dorr, 2445 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037, (202) 663-6800.

22. United States v. Green, 507 U.S. 545 (1993). Lowell Green, after being arrested on a drug charge and given his Miranda warnings, invoked his right to counsel and later pled guilty to a lesser charge as part of a plea bargain. Three months later, while still in police custody, he was arrested for murder and — after receiving Miranda warnings again — waived his Miranda rights and confessed to the crime. The question before the court was whether the lower court erred in excluding the confession on the ground that police may not reinitiate interrogation once a suspect has invoked his rights under Miranda. I argued on behalf of the United States that the confession should not have been excluded because it concerned a matter wholly unrelated to the original drug charge and because the passage of time and intervening guilty plea dispelled any concern that police had coerced Mr. Green into confessing the murder. Mr. Green died before the case was decided, and the Court dismissed the petition.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Robert S. Mueller, III, then Assistant Attorney General, William C. Bryson, then Deputy Solicitor General, Robert A. Long, Jr., then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Nina Goodman, Roy McLeese, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for respondent was Joseph R. Conte, Bond, Conte & Norman, P.C., 601 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Suite 900, Washington, D.C. 20001, (202) 638-4100.

23. Bray v. Alexandria Women's Health Clinic, 506 U.S. 263 (1993). Several abortion clinics sued to enjoin Operation Rescue, an anti-abortion organization, from conducting demonstrations outside their facilities. The question before the Court was whether the clinics had a cause of action under section 2 of the Civil Rights Act of 1871. As Deputy Solicitor General representing the United States as amicus curiae, I argued that, while the clinics had various state-law remedies, section 2 did not provide a federal cause of action because defendants' conduct did not involve class-based invidiously discriminatory animus, as required by the Court's section 2 precedents. The case was first argued before 8 Justices and reargued when a full court was available. The Court, in an opinion by Justice Scalia, agreed with the government's position.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Stuart M. Gerson, then Assistant Attorney General, Paul J. Larkin, Jr., then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioner was Jay Alan Sekulow, 1000 Thomas Jefferson Street, N.W., Suite 520, Washington, D.C. 20007, (202) 337-2273. Arguing for the respondents was Deborah Ellis, NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund, 99 Hudson Street, New York, N.Y. 10018, (212) 925-6635.

24. Franklin v. Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788 (1992). The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, having lost a seat in the House of Representatives due to reapportionment, challenged the Commerce Department's method for counting federal employees serving overseas in the 1990 census. The questions before the Court were, first, whether the conduct of the census is subject to judicial review and, second, whether the Commerce Department's allocation of overseas federal employees to their home states was consistent with both the Constitution and the Administrative Procedure Act. I argued on behalf of the United States that the census was not subject to judicial review and that, even if it were, the Commerce Department's method of allocating overseas federal employees was consistent with the Census Clause and not arbitrary or capricious. The opinion for the Court by Justice O'Connor ruled that the census was not reviewable under the Administrative Procedure Act, and that the Commerce Department's method of allocation, while subject to judicial review as to constitutional claims, was nevertheless consistent with the requirements of the Census Clause.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Stuart M. Gerson, then Assistant Attorney General, Edwin S. Kneedler, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Michael Jay Singer, Mark B. Stern, Lori M. Beranek, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for the respondent was Dwight Golann, Assistant Attorney General, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108, (617) 727-2200.

25. National R.R. Passenger Corp. v. Boston and Maine Corp., 503 U.S. 407 (1992). The question presented was whether the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) had properly approved an exercise of eminent domain authority by Amtrak under the Rail Passenger Service Act. As Acting Solicitor General, I argued that a subsequent congressional amendment to the Act — passed while rehearing was pending before the lower court — made clear that Amtrak's action was permissible. The Supreme Court agreed with our position, 6-3, and in an opinion by Justice Kennedy gave deference to the ICC's construction of the statute it has been charged with administering.

With me on the brief were then Deputy Solicitor General Lawrence G. Wallace and then Assistant to the Solicitor General Michael R. Dreeben (now Deputy Solicitor General), Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, as well as General Counsel Robert S. Burk, Deputy General Counsel Henri F. Rush, and Attorney Charles A. Stark, Interstate Commerce Commission (now the Surface Transportation Board), 1925 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20423, (202) 565-1558. Arguing for the respondent was Irwin Goldbloom, Latham & Watkins, 1001 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-2200.

26. Suter v. Artist M., 503 U.S. 347 (1992). Respondents filed a class-action suit alleging that officials at the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services failed to comply with the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980. The question before the Court was whether the Act contained an implied right of action or conferred rights enforceable through an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. I argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae that the language of the Act demonstrated that Congress contemplated enforcement by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, not through private civil suits. The Court agreed, 7-2, with Chief Justice Rehnquist writing for the majority.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Stuart M. Gerson, then Assistant Attorney General, Michael R. Dreeben, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for the petitioners was Christina M. Tchen, Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, 333 West Wacker Drive, Suite 2100, Chicago, IL 60606, (312) 407-0700. Arguing for the respondents was Michael G. Dsida, Cook County Public Guardian, 1112 South Oakley Boulevard, Chicago, IL 60612, (312) 633-2500.

27. Hudson v. McMillian, 503 U.S. 1 (1992). Petitioner Keith Hudson, a Louisiana prison inmate, filed suit against several corrections officers alleging that the officers had used excessive force while attempting to restrain him. The question before the Court was whether Hudson was required to show a "significant injury" as part of his claim that the officers' conduct amounted to cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment. Representing the United States as amicus curiae supporting the inmate, I argued that the "significant injury" test was inappropriate because it lacked any basis in the Constitution or in the Court's prior Eighth Amendment decisions. The Court agreed, ruling that where the claim is excessive force, a plaintiff need not show a "significant injury," but only that "prison officials maliciously and sadistically use[d] force to cause harm."

Co-counsel with me on our briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, John R. Dunne, then Assistant Attorney General, Robert S. Mueller, III,.then Assistant Attorney General, Christopher J. Wright, then Acting Deputy Solicitor General, Ronald J. Mann, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioner was Alvin J. Bronstein, National Prison Project of the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation, 1875 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Suite 410, Washington, D.C. 20009, (202) 234-4830. Arguing for respondent was Harry McCall Jr., Chang, McCall, Philips, Toler & Sarpy, 2300 Energy Centre, 1100 Poydras Street, New Orleans, LA 70163, (504) 585-7000.

28. Freytag v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 501 U.S. 868 (1991). In the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Congress authorized the Chief Judge of the United States Tax Court to appoint special trial judges to hear certain cases. The question before the Court was whether vesting this power in the Chief Judge was consistent with the Appointments Clause of the Constitution. Representing the Commissioner, I argued that petitioners had waived their constitutional claim by consenting to trial before a special trial judge and that, in any event, vesting this power with the Chief Judge was consistent with the Appointments Clause. The Court ruled that the Tax Court, as a "Court of Law" within the meaning of the Appointments Clause, was eligible to exercise the appointment power.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Shirley D. Peterson, then Assistant Attorney General, Stephen J. Marzen, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Gary R. Allen, Steven W. Parks, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioners was Kathleen M. Sullivan, then at Harvard Law School, 1525 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4633. Ms. Sullivan is now at Stanford Law School, Crown Quadrangle, 559 Nathan Abbott Way, Stanford, CA 94305, (650) 725-9875.

29. Florida v. Jimeno, 500 U.S. 248 (1991). A police officer received consent to search the car of a suspected drug trafficker, and found a kilogram of cocaine in a paper bag lying on the floor of the car; the suspect challenged the search of the bag. The question before the Court was whether the contents of the paper bag were beyond the scope of the consented search. I argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae that consent to search a car, in the absence of any express or implied limitation, includes consent to search a container within the car. The Court agreed, ruling that a search satisfies the Fourth Amendment if it is objectively reasonable for an officer to believe that the scope of a suspect's consent permitted a search of the container.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Robert S. Mueller, III, then Assistant Attorney General, William C. Bryson, then Deputy Solicitor General, Amy L. Wax, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Sean Connelly, Attorney, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioner was Michael J. Neimand, Assistant Attorney General, Department of Legal Affairs, Suite N-921, 401 Northwest 2nd Avenue, Miami, FL 33128, (305) 377-5441. Arguing for respondent was Jeffrey Weiner, Weiner & Ratzan, P.A., Two Datran Center, Nineteenth Floor, Suite 1910, 9130 South Dadeland Boulevard, Miami, FL 33156, (305) 670-9919.

30. Cottage Savings Ass'n v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 499 U.S. 554 (1991). Cottage Savings Association exchanged a pool of its own mortgages for an equivalently-valued pool of mortgages belonging to four other savings and loans; the Internal Revenue Service disallowed Cottage's attempt to claim a deduction for a realized loss on the transaction. The question before the Court was whether, under the relevant statute, an exchange of interests in mortgages gave rise to a tax-deductible loss. Representing the Commissioner as Acting Solicitor General, I argued that the exchange of substantially identical pools of mortgages did not give rise to a deductible loss because the property transferred was not materially different from that received. The Court disagreed in an opinion by Justice Marshall, ruling that a gain or loss is realized so long as the properties exchanged embody "legally distinct entitlements."

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Shirley D. Peterson, then Assistant Attorney General, Lawrence G. Wallace, then Deputy Solicitor General, Clifford M. Sloan, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Richard Farber, Bruce R. Ellisen, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for the petitioner was Dennis L. Manes, Schwartz, Manes & Ruby, 2900 Carew Tower, 441 Vine Street, Cincinnati, OH 45202, (513) 579-1414.

31. United States v. Centennial Savings Bank FSB, 499 U.S. 573 (1991). On its 1981 tax return, Centennial Savings Bank claimed a deduction for a realized loss from an exchange of mortgages, and excluded certificate of deposit withdrawal penalties from its income; the Internal Revenue Service disallowed both. The question before the Court was whether the deduction and exclusion were permitted under the relevant statutes. As Acting Solicitor General, I argued on behalf of the United States that an exchange of substantially identical pools of mortgages did not give rise to a tax-deductible loss, and that withdrawal penalties did not constitute income from the discharge of indebtedness and therefore could not be excluded. The Court agreed as to the exclusion of withdrawal penalties, but relying on Cottage Savings, supra, which was argued the same day, ruled that Centennial could claim a tax-deductible loss on the mortgage transaction.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Shirley D. Peterson, then Assistant Attorney General, Lawrence G. Wallace, then Deputy Solicitor General, Clifford M. Sloan, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Richard Farber, Bruce R. Ellisen, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for respondent was Michael F. Duhl, Hopkins & Sutter, 888 Sixteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 835-8257.

32. Grogan v. Garner, 498 U.S. 279 (1991). Before petitioners could collect on a securities fraud judgment they had won against respondent, respondent included the judgment as a dischargeable debt in a petition under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. Petitioners then brought an action claiming that the judgment was not dischargeable under the Bankruptcy Code because it was money obtained by "actual fraud." The question before the Court was whether petitioners' claim under the Bankruptcy Code required proof of fraud by clear and convincing evidence, rather than by the preponderance of the evidence — the standard applied in the securities fraud trial. I argued on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae that the language of the relevant statute was silent as to burden of proof and that applying a standard of clear and convincing evidence in bankruptcy actions would require burdensome relitigation of fraud claims. The Court agreed, and in a unanimous opinion by Justice Stevens, ruled that the preponderance of the evidence standard applied.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were James R. Doty, then General Counsel, Paul Gonson, Solicitor, Jacob H. Stillman, Associate General Counsel, Richard A. Kirby, Senior Litigation Counsel, Joseph O. Click, Attorney, Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington, D.C. 20549, Alfred J.T. Byrne, General Counsel, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Washington, D.C. 20429, Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Robert A. Long, Jr., then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for the petitioners was Michael J. Gallagher, One Main Plaza, Suite 840, 4435 Main Street, Kansas City, MO 64111, (816) 756-0030. Arguing for the respondent was Timothy K. McNamara, 2600 Mutual Benefit Life Building, 2345 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, MO 64108, (816) 842-0820.

33. Irwin v. Department of Veterans Affairs, 498 U.S. 89 (1990). The lower court dismissed Shirley Irwin's suit under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 because it was filed more than 30 days after the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) denied Irwin's discrimination claim. The questions before the Court were whether the statutory 30-day period began to run when the EEOC letter was delivered to Irwin's attorney, as opposed to when Irwin or his attorney actually received the letter, and whether the 30-day period was subject to equitable tolling. Representing the Department of Veterans Affairs as Deputy Solicitor General, I argued that Irwin received constructive notice of the EEOC decision when the letter was delivered to his counsel and that the 30-day time limit was jurisdictional and therefore not subject to equitable tolling. The Court, in an opinion by Chief Justice Rehnquist, ruled that the 30-day period ran from delivery of the letter and that equitable tolling, while not categorically barred by the statute, did not extend to the circumstances of this case.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Stuart M. Gerson, then Assistant Attorney General, Harriet S. Shapiro, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Robert S. Greenspan, Michael E. Robinson, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioner was Jon R. Ker, P.O. Box 1087, Hewitt, TX 76643.

34. Lujan v. National Wildlife Federation, 497 U.S. 871 (1990). Two individuals filed suit challenging thousands of agency decisions affecting millions of acres of public land. The question presented was whether the individuals' allegations of injury, based on their affidavits alone, were sufficient to support standing to bring such a broad-based challenge. As Acting Solicitor General, I argued that the allegations were insufficient to give the respondents standing to sue. The Court, in a 5-4 opinion by Justice Scalia, agreed and ruled that vague and conclusory allegations of injury did not suffice to confer a right to challenge an entire agency program, and that the federal courts could not presume the specific facts necessary to establish adequate injury.

Co-counsel for the United States assisting me were then Assistant Attorney General Richard Stewart, then Deputy Solicitor General Lawrence G. Wallace, then Assistant to the Solicitor General Lawrence Robbins, Peter Steenland, Anne Almy, Fred Disheroon, and Vicki Plaut, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. E. Barrett Prettyman, Jr., Hogan & Hartson, 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5685, argued the case for the respondent.

35. United States v. Kokinda, 497 U.S. 720 (1990). Two individuals soliciting contributions outside a U.S. Post Office were convicted under a postal regulation making it a misdemeanor to solicit funds on "postal premises" — defined to include the exterior walkways adjacent to and surrounding a suburban post office building, but not the public sidewalks alongside the street. The question before the Supreme Court was whether respondents' convictions were consistent with the First Amendment. As Deputy Solicitor General, I argued on behalf of the United States that the regulation was constitutionally valid as applied to the respondents. Writing for a plurality of four Justices, Justice O'Connor agreed that the postal walkway where the conduct at issue occurred was not a public forum, but instead government property set aside to facilitate particular government business — in this case, the handling of the mails.

Other counsel on the brief with me were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, then Assistant Attorney General Edward S.G. Dennis, Jr., then Assistant to the Solicitor General Amy L. Wax, and Thomas E. Booth, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Counsel for the opposing parties was Jay Alan Sekulow, American Center for Law & Justice, P.O. Box 64429, Virginia Beach, VA 23467, (757) 226-2489.

36. Wilder v. Virginia Hosp. Ass'n, 496 U.S. 498 (1990). The Virginia Hospital Association filed suit against several Virginia officials under 42 U.S.C § 1983 to enforce a provision of the Medicaid Act requiring "reasonable and adequate" reimbursement of medical care. The question before the Court was whether the provision was enforceable through an action under section 1983. As Deputy Solicitor General representing the United States as amicus curiae, I argued that neither the language nor the history of the provision evinced an intent by Congress to create a right enforceable through section 1983. The Court, by a 5-4 margin, ruled in an opinion by Justice Brennan that the mandatory language of the relevant provision of the Medicaid Act gave rise to an enforceable right.

Co-counsel with me on the briefs were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Stuart M. Gerson, then Assistant Attorney General, Lawrence S. Robbins, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Anthony J. Steinmeyer, Irene M. Solet, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Arguing for petitioner was R. Claire Guthrie, Deputy Attorney General, 101 North Eighth Street, Richmond, VA 23219, (804) 786-4072. Arguing for respondent was Walter Dellinger, Corner of Science Drive and Towerview Road, Durham, N.C. 27706, (919) 684-3404.

37. Atlantic Richfield Co. v. USA Petroleum Co., 495 U.S. 328 (1990). USA Petroleum sued Atlantic Richfield, alleging antitrust violations. The question presented was whether a firm suffers an "antitrust injury" under section 4 of the Clayton Act when it loses sales to a competitor that charges non-predatory prices pursuant to a vertical, maximum-price-fixing scheme. Representing the United States as amicus curiae in support of the petitioner, I argued that a plaintiff suffers an "antitrust injury" only if its injury results from the anticompetitive effect of the alleged violation, and that the antitrust laws do not protect competitors from non-predatory pricing by their rivals. Justice Brennan, writing for the majority, accepted this argument and held that USA Petroleum could not maintain the antitrust suit.

My co-counsel on the brief were Kenneth W. Starr, then Solicitor General, Michael Boudin, then Acting Assistant Attorney General, David L. Shapiro, then Deputy Solicitor General, Michael R. Dreeben, then Assistant to the Solicitor General, Catherine G. O'Sullivan and Steve MacIsaac, Attorneys, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, and Kevin J. Arquit, General Counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20530. Ronald C. Redcay of Hughes Hubbard & Reed, 555 South Flower Street, Los Angeles, CA 90071, (213) 489-5140, represented the petitioner. Maxwell M. Blecher of Blecher & Collins P.C., 611 West Sixth Street, Suite 2800, Los Angeles, CA 90017, (213) 622-4222, represented the respondent.

38. United States v. Halper, 490 U.S. 435 (1989). Mr. Halper had been convicted of filing false Medicaid claims, had paid a fine, and served a sentence of imprisonment. The government thereafter sought to impose civil penalties for the same false Medicaid claims. The question presented was whether the Double Jeopardy Clause barred the imposition of civil penalties under federal law against an individual who had been convicted and punished under federal criminal law for the same conduct. In private practice at the time, I was appointed by the Supreme Court to argue in support of the judgment below and handled the case on a pro bono basis. I argued that the aspect of the Double Jeopardy Clause forbidding successive punishments was not limited to the criminal context, but applied in certain circumstances to civil penalties as well. In a unanimous opinion authored by Justice Blackmun, the Court agreed.

I had no co-counsel assisting me. Arguing for the United States was then Assistant to the Solicitor General Michael R. Dreeben, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217.

Cases in which, while I was in private practice, my name appeared on the briefs of petitioners or respondents, but in which I did not present oral argument:

1. Alaska Dep't of Envt'l Conservation v. EPA, 540 U.S. 461 (2004). The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC), in approving the operation of a mine, determined that the mine's proposed electric power generation plan made use of the "best available control technology," as required by the Clean Air Act. EPA disagreed with DEC's determination. The question before the Court was whether EPA had authority under the Clean Air Act to review DEC's determination and block issuance of the permit. My participation in the case was interrupted by confirmation to the D.C. Circuit, and I participated only at the certiorari stage and in petitioner's opening brief. The Court ruled, 5-4, that EPA had authority to block the permit.

With me on the briefs were Gregg D. Renkes, then Attorney General, State of Alaska Department of Law, P.O. Box 110300, Juneau, Alaska 99811, (907) 465-3600, Cameron M. Leonard, Assistant Attorney General, State of Alaska Department of Law, 100 Cushman Street, Suite 400, Fairbanks, AK 99701, (907) 451-2811, Jonathan S. Franklin, Lorane F. Hebert, Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600. Arguing for the respondents was Thomas Hungar, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217.

2. Goldberg v. Sweet, 488 U.S. 252 (1989). The State of Illinois imposed a tax on all interstate telecommunications charged to a service address within the State. The question for the Court was whether this tax violated the Constitution's Commerce Clause. We argued on behalf of two Illinois residents that it did. The Court disagreed, holding that the tax was fairly apportioned, non-discriminatory, and fairly related to the activities of taxpayers within the State.

With me on the briefs were Walter A. Smith, Jr., Hogan & Hartson, 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-6448, William G. Clark, Jr., William G. Clark, Jr. & Associates, Ltd., 29 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 263-0830, John G. Jacobs, Jonah J. Orlofsky, Plotkin & Jacobs, Ltd., 116 South Michigan Avenue, Suite 1300, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 372-0001. Arguing for appellees was Andrew L. Frey, Mayer, Brown & Platt, 2000 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Suite 6500, Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 778-0602.

3. Allegheny Pittsburgh Coal Co. v. County Comm'n of Webster County, 485 U.S. 976 (1988). The Webster County tax assessor valued petitioners' recently purchased properties at their purchase prices, but made only minor adjustments to the value of similar property that had not been recently conveyed. The question presented was whether this practice — the so-called "welcome stranger" approach — denied petitioners equal protection of the laws under the Fourteenth Amendment. We argued on behalf of petitioners that it did. The Court, in a unanimous opinion by Chief Justice Rehnquist, agreed.

With me on the briefs were William James Murphy, Robert T. Shaffer, III, Murphy & McDaniel, 118 West Mulberry St., Baltimore, MD 21201, (301) 685-3810, E. Barrett Prettyman, Jr., Hogan & Hartson, 555 13th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5685, Ernest V. Morton, Jr., 210 Back Fork St., Webster Springs, W.V. 26288, (304) 847-5256, William D. Peltz, 900 Louisiana St., P.O. Box 2463, Houston, TX 77252, (713) 241-2414, Dan O. Callaghan, Callaghan & Ruckman, 48 East Main St., Richwood, W.V. 26261, (304) 846-2561, W. T. Weber, Jr., 208 Main Ave., Weston, W.V. 26452, (304) 269-2228. Arguing for the respondents was C. William Ullrich, Chief Deputy, Attorney General's Office, State of West Virginia, State Capitol, Charleston, W.V. 25305, (304) 348-2021.

4. Gwaltney of Smithfield, Ltd. v. Chesapeake Bay Foundation, 484 U.S. 49 (1987). In this case, environmental groups sued Gwaltney of Smithfield, the holder of a Clean Water Act discharge permit, for having exceeded in past years the effluent limitations of its permit. The question before the Court was whether the action could be maintained under the Clean Water Act. Representing Gwaltney, E. Barrett Prettyman, Jr. of Hogan & Hartson argued that the citizen-suit provision of the Act did not authorize such suits for wholly past violations. The Court agreed, in an opinion by Justice Marshall.

I was on the briefs with Mr. Prettyman, along with Richard M. Poulson, Patrick M. Raher, David J. Hayes, and Catherine James LaCroix of Hogan & Hartson, then located at 815 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, and now at 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009, (202) 637-5600. Respondents were represented by the late Louis F. Claiborne, Washburn and Kemp P.C., 144 Second Street, San Francisco, CA 94188, (415) 543-8131.

5. FCC v. Florida Power Corp., 480 U.S. 245 (1987). The Pole Attachments Act calls on the FCC to regulate the rates that utilities can charge cable television companies for use of the utilities' poles. The question presented was whether the Act violates the Takings Clause of the United States Constitution. Representing appellants Group W Cable Inc., National Cable Television Association Inc., and Cox Cablevision Corporation, Jay E. Ricks, then of Hogan & Hartson, argued that rate regulation does not constitute a per se taking of property, and that the specific rate imposed by the FCC provided for adequate compensation. The Court, Justice Marshall writing for the majority, accepted both arguments and upheld the constitutionality of the Act.

I was on the briefs with Mr. Ricks, along with E. Barrett Prettyman, Jr., Gardner F. Gillespie, III, and Timothy J. Dowling of Hogan & Hartson, then located at 815 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, and now at 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600. Lawrence G. Wallace, then Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 633-2217, argued the case on behalf of the FCC. The appellees were represented by Allan J. Topol of Covington & Burling, 1201 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20044, (202) 662-6000.

Cases in which, while I was in private practice, my name appeared on an amicus brief at the merits stage:

1. Pharmaceutical Research & Mnfrs. of Am. v. Walsh, 538 U.S. 644 (2003). State law created a drug rebate in excess of that provided by Medicaid, and subjected non-participating companies to a pre-authorization regime for Medicaid sales. The question presented was whether the state regime was consistent with federal law and the United States Constitution. On behalf of the United States Chamber of Commerce, I submitted an amicus brief in support of petitioner, in which I contended that the state law was preempted by the Medicaid Act and conflicted with the Commerce Clause. The Court disagreed. While no opinion on Medicaid preemption commanded a majority of the Justices, the Court held that the district court had abused its discretion in enjoining the state program. Writing for a majority, Justice Stevens also rejected the Commerce Clause challenge.

My co-counsel on the brief were Catherine E. Stetson, Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600 and Robin S. Conrad, National Chamber Litigation Center Inc., 1615 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20062 (202) 463-5337. Carter G. Phillips of Sidley Austin Brown & Wood L.L.P., 1501 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005, (202) 736-8000, represented the petitioners and shared oral argument with Edwin S. Kneedler, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, appearing on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae supporting reversal. Andrew S. Hagler, Assistant Attorney General, Six State House Station, Augusta, ME 04333, (207) 626-8800, represented the respondents.

2. Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine, 537 U.S. 51 (2002). Petitioner, representing the estate of a boat passenger who had died when struck by a propeller blade, brought a tort suit in state court against the boat engine designer. The question presented was whether federal law preempted the suit. In an amicus brief on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce, I maintained that the uniquely federal field of maritime law, the Federal Boat Safety Act, and a Coast Guard decision not to require propeller guards on engines such as the one at issue, all conflicted with the petitioner's state tort claim. Writing for the majority, Justice Stevens disagreed and held that the suit could go forward.

With me on the brief were Catherine E. Stetson of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Robin S. Conrad, National Chamber Litigation Center Inc., 1615 H. Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20062, (202) 463-5337. Leslie A. Brueckner, Trial Lawyers for Public Justice P.C., 1717 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Suite 800, Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 797-8600, represented the petitioner and shared oral argument with Malcolm L. Stewart, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, appearing on behalf of the United States as amicus curiae. The respondent was represented by Stephen M. Shapiro of Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw, 190 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, IL 60603, (312) 782-0600.

3. United States v. Fior D'Italia, Inc., 536 U.S. 238 (2002). Fior D'Italia, a restaurant, challenged the IRS's method of assessing Federal Insurance Contribution Act (FICA) taxes on tips received by restaurant employees. The question presented was whether FICA authorized the IRS to base the assessment on an aggregate estimate of all the tips received by restaurant employees, rather than estimating each employee's tip income separately. On behalf of the American Gaming Association, I filed an amicus brief in support of the restaurant, in which I contended that the IRS's aggregate method improperly shifted the responsibility of policing tip reporting from the agency onto the employer. Justice Breyer, writing for the majority, disagreed and held that FICA allowed the IRS to use an aggregate method.

I was assisted by John S. Stanton, Robert H. Kapp, and Lorane F. Hebert of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr. and Judy L. Patterson, American Gaming Association, 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004 (202) 637-6500. Eileen J. O'Connor, Assistant Attorney General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, represented the United States. Tracy J. Power of Power & Power, 2300 Clarendon Blvd., Arlington, VA 22201, (703) 841-1330, represented the respondents.

4. Festo Corporation v. Shoketsu Kinzoku Kogyo Kabushiki Co., 535 U.S. 722 (2002). The Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit held that patent-holders cannot rely on the "doctrine of equivalents" — which protects them from copyists who try to circumvent the patent by making minor alterations in design — if the holders had previously submitted a claim-narrowing amendment to the Patent and Trademark Office. The question before the Supreme Court was whether this ruling complied with the Patent Act and the United States Constitution. Representing Litton Systems, Inc., I filed an amicus brief in support of petitioner, arguing that the Federal Circuit's decision effected a taking of private property without just compensation, and that the ruling should not be applied retroactively. The Court, in a unanimous opinion by Justice Kennedy, vacated the Federal Circuit's decision and held that claim-narrowing amendments do not always bar patentholders from relying on the doctrine of equivalents.

With me on the brief were Catherine E. Stetson of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Frederick A. Lorig and Sidford L. Brown of Bright & Lorig, 633 West 5th Street, Los Angeles, CA 90071, (213) 627-7774, Rory J. Radding of Pennie & Edmonds L.L.P., 1155 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036, (212) 790-9090, and Stanton T. Lawrence III and Carl P. Bretscher of Pennie & Edmonds L.L.P., 1667 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 496-4400. Robert H. Bork, Suite 1000, 1150 17th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 862-5851, argued the case for the petitioner. Lawrence G. Wallace, then Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, argued for the United States as amicus curiae supporting vacatur and remand. Arthur I. Neustadt of Oblon, Spivak, Mcclelland, Maier & Neustadt P.C., 1755 Jefferson Davis Highway, Arlington, VA 22202, (703) 413-3000, argued for the respondents.

5. Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Mineta, 534 U.S. 103 (2001). Petitioner Adarand Constructors challenged a Department of Transportation program on the ground that racial preferences in the program violated the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. On behalf of the Association of General Contractors of America, I filed an amicus brief supporting petitioner, in which I argued that the DOT program did not have a sufficient basis in evidence of discrimination, as required by Supreme Court precedent, to support the preferences. The Court dismissed certiorari as improvidently granted — finding that Adarand lacked standing — and hence did not reach the merits of the dispute.

My co-counsel on the brief were Lorane F. Hebert of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Michael E. Kennedy, General Counsel, The Associated General Contractors of America Inc., 333 John Carlyle Street, Suite 200, Alexandria, VA 22314, (703) 837-5335. Adarand was represented by William Perry Pendley, Mountain States Legal Foundation, 707 Seventeenth Street, Suite 3030, Denver, CO 80202, (303) 292-2021. The Secretary of Transportation was represented by Theodore B. Olson, then Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, and now with Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher L.L.P., 1050 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 955-8668.

6. United States and Dep't of Agriculture v. United Foods, Inc., 533 U.S. 405 (2001). A mushroom producer challenged a federal assessment imposed on the mushroom industry to fund advertisements promoting mushroom sales. The question before the Court was whether the assessment violated the First Amendment. On behalf of the American Mushroom Institute, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, the American Soybean Association, the National Milk Producers Federation, the Milk Industry Foundation, the United Egg Producers, and the United Egg Association, I filed an amicus brief in support of the United States and the Department of Agriculture, in which I defended the assessment as a form of government speech. In an opinion by Justice Kennedy, the Court struck the assessment down, but specifically noted that it was not engaging the government speech argument, because the petitioners had not raised it below.

With me on the brief were David G. Leitch, then of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Wayne R. Watkinson Richard and T. Rossier McLeod of Watkinson & Miller, One Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001, (202) 842-2345. Barbara McDowell, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, represented the petitioners. Laurence H. Tribe, Hauser Hall 420, 1575 Massachusetts Ave., Cambridge, MA 02138, (617) 495-4621, represented the respondents.

7. Jones v. United States, 529 U.S. 848 (2000). The defendant in this case set fire to his cousin's house. The question before the Court was whether this act constituted a federal crime under 18 U.S.C. § 884(i), which outlaws the arson of "property used in interstate or foreign commerce or in any activity affecting interstate or foreign commerce." In an amicus brief on behalf of Dale Lynn Ryan — another defendant convicted of a similar act — I argued that the arson of private residences does not fall within the statute's compass.

The Court, in an opinion by Justice Ginsburg, agreed and dismissed the federal prosecution.

With me on the brief was Gregory G. Garre of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600. The petitioner was represented by Donald M. Falk of Mayer, Brown & Platt, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 263-3000. Representing the United States was Michael R. Dreeben, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217.

8. Greater New Orleans Broadcasting Ass'n v. United States, 527 U.S. 173 (1999). Petitioners sued the United States and the FCC, seeking to establish their right to broadcast advertisements for legal gambling at area casinos. The question presented was whether 18 U.S.C. § 1304, which criminalizes broadcast advertising of lotteries and casino gambling, could be applied in areas where gambling was legal. In an amicus brief on behalf of the American Gaming Association, I argued that such an application violated the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. The Court agreed, in an opinion by Justice Stevens.

My co-counsel on the brief were David G. Leitch and Adam K. Levin of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, and Frank J. Fahrenkopf, Jr. and Judy L. Patterson, American Gaming Association, 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-6500. The petitioners were represented by the late Bruce J. Ennis, Jr. of Jenner & Block, 601 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005. The United States was represented by Barbara D. Underwood, then Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217. Ms. Underwood is now Chief Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, 147 Pierrepont St., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11201, (718) 254-7000.

9. Eastern Enterprises v. Apfel, 524 U.S. 498 (1998). This case involved a challenge to the Coal Act, which required employers to fund coal industry retiree benefits, even if the employer had since exited the coal business. The question presented was whether this funding mechanism violated the Takings Clause of the United States Constitution. In an amicus brief on behalf of the Ohio Valley Coal Company and Maple Creek Mining, Inc., I argued that the Act did not effect a taking of private property. The Court disagreed and held that the Act was unconstitutional as applied to employers who had left the coal industry.

With me on the brief was Mathew A. Lamberti of Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600. John T. Montgomery of Ropes & Gray, One International Place, Boston, MA 02110, (617) 951-7000, argued on behalf of the petitioner. Edwin S. Kneedler, Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, and Peter Buscemi of Morgan, Lewis & Bockius L.L.P, 1800 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, (202) 467-7190, represented the respondents.

10. Glickman v. Wileman Brothers & Elliott, Inc., 521 U.S. 457 (1997). Growers, handlers, and processors of California tree fruits challenged targeted federal assessments used to fund generic advertising of California nectarines, plums, and peaches. The question presented was whether the assessments violated the First Amendment. On behalf of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture, the National Milk Producers Federation, and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association as amici curiae in support of petitioner, I argued that the assessment was a constitutional exercise of government speech. The Court upheld the assessments but did not engage the government speech argument.

With me on the brief were Wayne R. Watkinson and Richard T. Rossier of McLeod, Watkinson & Miller, One Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001, (202) 842-2345. Alan Jenkins, Assistant to the Solicitor General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530, (202) 514-2217, represented the petitioners. Thomas E. Campagne of Thomas E. Campagne & Associates, 1685 North Helm Avenue, Fresno, CA 93727, (209) 255-1637, represented the respondents.

11. California Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Dillingham Construction, N.A., Inc., 519 U.S. 316 (1997). A California law prohibited employers from paying an apprentice wage to workers in unapproved apprenticeship programs; an employer brought suit challenging the law. The question before the Court was whether the law was pre-empted by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA). I participated in an amicus brief filed on behalf of the Associated General Contractors of America. We argued that if the Court found the California law protected by ERISA's saving clause, it should do so only to the extent that California's standards for approving apprenticeship programs were consistent with federal apprenticeship standards. The Court held that the California law did not fall within ERISA's pre-emption clause, and did not reach the saving clause issue.

With me on the brief were William G. Jeffery, Jeffery, Ferring & Jenkel, 1000 Second Avenue, Suite 3300, Seattle, WA 98104, (206) 623-4600, David P. Wolds, Merrill, Schultz & Wolds, Ltd., 401 West "A" Street, Suite 2550, San Diego, CA 92101, (619) 234-4525, Carmel Martin, Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5600, Michael E. Kennedy, General Counsel, Associated General Contractors Of America, Inc., 1957 E Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 383-2735. Arguing for the petitioners was John M. Rea, Chief Counsel, State of California Department of Industrial Relations, Office of the Director, Legal Unit, 45 Fremont Street, Suite 450, San Francisco, CA 94105, (415) 972-8900. 12. Medtronic, Inc. v. Lohr, 518 U.S. 470 (1996). The question presented was whether the Medical Device Amendments (MDA) of 1976 pre-empted a state common-law negligence action. I participated in an amicus brief filed on behalf of the Center for Patient Advocacy and the California Health Care Institute. We argued that the comprehensive regulatory scheme established by the MDA pre-empted state common law claims. The Court ruled, 5-4, that respondents' common law claims were not pre-empted by the MDA.

13. Brown v. Pro Football, Inc., D/B/A Washington Redskins, 518 U.S. 231 (1996). After labor negotiations reached an impasse, NFL owners agreed among themselves to impose unilaterally the terms of their last bargaining offer. The question for the Court was whether this agreement fell within an implicit antitrust exemption for collective bargaining. I participated in an amicus brief filed on behalf of the Associated General Contractors of America. We argued in support of the respondents that certain activities of multi-employer bargaining groups were exempt from the antitrust laws. The Court held, 8-1, that the collective-bargaining exemption applied.

14. Holly Farms Corporation v. NLRB, 517 U.S. 392 (1996). The NLRB approved a collective bargaining unit that included a class of workers known in the poultry industry as "live-haul" workers; Holly Farms challenged the Board's decision on the ground that "live-haul" workers are agricultural laborers exempt from the coverage of the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA). The question before the Court was whether the Board's decision was based on a reasonable interpretation of the NLRA. I participated in an amicus brief filed on behalf of the National Broiler Council. We argued in support of the petitioners that the Board's decision was contrary to the NLRA. The Court disagreed, and ruled that the Board's interpretation was reasonable.

With me on the brief were Gary Jay Kushner and Jonathan S. Franklin, Hogan & Hartson L.L.P., 555 13th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20004, (202) 637-5856.

15. Varity Corp. v. Howe, 516 U.S. 489 (1996). A group of employee welfare benefit plan beneficiaries sued their employer alleging that they had been misled into withdrawing from the plan. The questions before the Court involved whether the employer breached its fiduciary obligations under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and whether the particular ERISA provision at issue authorized the beneficiaries to sue to enforce those obligations. I participated in an amicus brief filed on behalf of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in support of the petitioner. We argued, first, that the relevant provision did not provide a cause of action because the liability of fiduciaries was governed by other sections of ERISA, and second, that ERISA contemplated a different standard from the one argued for by the beneficiaries. The Court disagreed, and ruled for the beneficiaries.

With me on the brief were Stephan A. Bokat, Mona C. Zieberg, The National Chamber Litigation Center, Inc., 1615 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20062, (202) 463-5337, Evan Miller, H. 16. Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Pena, 515 U.S. 200 (1995). Adarand Constructors challenged a federal government preference in the award of contracts for firms that employ minority-owned subcontractors. The question before the Court was whether this preference was subject to strict scrutiny. I participated in an amicus brief filed on behalf of the Associated General Contractors of America in support of petitioner. We argued that the Court's earlier decision to apply strict scrutiny in the context of state and local contracts should apply equally to federal contracts. The Court agreed.

With me on the brief were Michael E. Kennedy, Special Counsel, Associated General Contractors of America, Inc., 1957 E Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 383-2735, David G. Leitch, H.
